

Sanborn Head Celebrates New Denver Office

BY: MARCEL KOZLOWSKI, PE ON APRIL 18, 2024

Sanborn Head's Denver team recently celebrated the opening of our new office in Lakewood, Colorado. After five and a half successful years operating out of an office in Aurora, the team is excited about starting a new chapter on the West side of Denver near the foothills of the Rockies. The space was fit out to match the look and feel of our other corporate offices, extending the warmth and openness of our brand to our new Western gateway. The new location will further opportunities to connect with clients, new staff members, and strategic partners while providing a great base to engage the team in social events, staff training, and professional development opportunities.

We welcomed clients, partners, and colleagues to the new space with an open house in early April. The event was a great opportunity to show off the new office to long-time clients while getting to know new clients and partners in the area. Joining the party were a number of folks from across our firm who joined the Denver team to officially open the new office.

The Denver team provides civil, geotechnical, and environmental engineering and geological services to clients in a variety of markets, including energy, solid waste, industrial, and real estate development. The team takes great pride in delivering a high level of service and technical excellence to our clients, helping them achieve their goals despite the challenges they may be facing.

If you are interested in finding out more about our work in the Four Corners area and beyond, or if you would like to hear more about career opportunities at Sanborn Head, please send me a note. We look forward to sharing some examples of how we partnered with our clients to help them achieve their project vision.